GREETINGS FROM THE PASTOR...

From Pastor Jami Possinger

Are you afraid of change? Many of you know that Mitch and I have been through a lot of changes recently and I have had to ask that question of myself time and time again. Change is unsettling – we crave the familiar. We like to return to our favorite vacation spots and are upset if they do not look like we remember. We like to have our kitchens stay organized the way we like them to be. Robert Sapolsky of Stanford University has found from his research that if you have not learned to like certain foods by your early thirties, chances are you will never like them (that's why I STILL don't like salad). And the music you will enjoy most throughout your life will be the music you listened to in your twenties (for me that's Earth, Wind and Fire; Billy Joel; Jackson Browne; The Spinners; Chicago; the Bee Gees).

According to science, all living creatures crave homeostasis – when things remain the same. It is a lot more efficient to be able to do things the way you have always done them – without having to think about it. (Think of suddenly encountering a detour on your way home from work.) So it is no wonder that we tend to resist change even when change would seem to be for our benefit.

Change makes us uncomfortable – change means loss of control – yet... change is inevitable. The Greek philosopher Heraclitus said 2,000 years ago that “nothing endures but change.” The Buddha taught his disciples to prepare for change by saying to themselves, “Everything I hold dear will one day change and be taken from me.” So if change is going to happen anyway, wouldn't it make more sense – and make our lives easier – for us to get over our fears and learn to accept the inevitability of change – even to welcome it?!! Because think about it – do we really want our children to remain six years old and never grow up? Change happens and will continue to happen – so what we really need to consider is whether we will fear it or embrace it.

So I'll ask again – are you afraid of change? Be more afraid of being unable to change – that is truly the scary part. Author Bruce Barton warns that “when you are through changing – you're through.” Change is a law of life. And the truth is we can't hold back the tide of change any more than we can keep the sun from setting or the seasons from changing. All we can control is how well we respond to the changes and on that question the Bible offers us the answer – God's promise, “Do not be afraid, I am with you.”

Blessings, Pastor Jami

PASTOR BRIAN'S PREPONDERANT BUSINESS

This past month has been crazy busy, but the best kind of crazy! The last week of June I was in Wildwood with our youth group for a week. I came home for a day and was off to Colorado for a friend's wedding the first week of July. My first week back in Pennsylvania was our Vacation Bible School! As much fun as the past three weeks have been, it's nice to be settling back into a routine now. Which gets me thinking about human habits and the need for a healthy balance of routine and excitement in our lives. We all know people who are always looking for something new, always wanting to jump into the next adventure. Then, on the flip side, we all know people who are uncomfortable with any kind of change whatsoever: people who know their routine and absolutely need it to stay the same. There's a feeling of safety and security in always having the same pattern to life, but there's a sense of excitement and freshness to a life that's always changing. And while some folks prefer one extreme or the other, I think the key to most people's lives is a managing healthy balance between the two.

When I graduated high school, I remember not wanting to leave home. I was very comfortable with life in my hometown and had no intention of going too far away for college. But, as it turns out, Indiana was the place I was destined to go: 15 hours away. I was homesick my first year, but felt like it was where I needed to be. After traveling a lot my junior year (Israel one summer and a semester in Europe) I sought that life of excitement. During seminary I moved around a lot as well, and wouldn't trade those experiences for anything. Eventually though, I reached a point where I was happy to settle somewhere for a while. And thinking of it, spending the past two years in my apartment in Schnecksville is the longest I've lived anywhere since leaving home when I was 18.

So I think in my own life I've come to appreciate both a stay at home life and the always on the run adventure lifestyle. There needs to be both for most people. When life gets dry and mundane and we feel dragged down by routine, we should pray for new opportunities to offer our gifts in fresh new ways. And when we feel overwhelmed and exhausted from new experience after new experience, it is time to relax, lighten our load, and seek a more cozy routine. Don't fear change in your life or hesitate to take on new challenges because God might be trying to pull you out of your comfort zone. But at the same time, do not think you always have to accept every new direction that appears on the road of life; sometimes it's best to be grounded and settled and not always take on the latest whim. Seek to remain open to where God is calling. Follow the Spirit's direction in your life. And allow a healthy balance of routine and routine-disruption to flow through your journey.

*With peace and joy,
Pastor Brian*

Today's quotation:

You pray in your distress and in your need; would that you might also pray in the fullness of your joy and in your days of abundance. ~ Khalil Gibran

Today's Meditation:

Prayer could be the most misunderstood force in our lives. Many of us use it solely as a refuge in times of trouble, as if we keep it in reserve for when things go bad. But prayer during the good times can be one of the most important elements of our lives. Think of it in physical terms--when are we the most effective physically, when we're down and out or when we're feeling very good and things are going well? When do we have the most strength and endurance? When are we more able to help others? Likewise, prayer can be strong and effective when we're at our strongest--yet we neglect prayer at those times because we think of it as something that we have only to pull us out of holes.

But how would our prayers for others feel if they were coming from a place of strength? How would our prayers for the world feel if we were to pray in our days of plenty? How much strength could we give our prayers when we feel joyous, exuberant, alive? How much enthusiasm and love could we put into prayers on the good days?

And is it possible that such prayers might be added to the positive energy of the world, helping the positive to grow in strength?

Prayers in times of distress tend to be for ourselves, or they tend to take on a tone of desperation. Prayers in times of abundance can help us to contribute to the good and the positive and the uplifting and the encouraging of the world, and such a contribution can be a boon not only to ourselves, but to everyone else.

Questions to consider:

- When do you tend to pray most? Why?
- Why do so many people pray only in times of need?
- Is prayer a lifejacket for you, or a light that you put out for the world to see?
